Subject: congratulation message

Sir Alan Langlands

I hope this email find you well.

As this year marks the 70th anniversary of the founding of the People's Republic of China, we are going to hold the National Day reception on Sep.18th to celebrate this momentous event. The invitations will be delivered to your office soon. We understand you might not be able to attend the event in person considering your busy schedule, so we would like to request a 2-3 minutes video message from you as congratulations, which will be live streamed to most Chinese students studying in North England. If you are willing to do so, could you please record a video and email it to us? If necessary, we could arrange some student to your office to film the video.

Looking forward to receiving your reply.
